

Call for Proposals-Occasional Paper Series Publication (Two Calls for Proposals)

Re-Connecting the Pipeline: African American Education in the Next Century

The Center for African American Research and Policy, the research arm of the Brothers of the Academy Institute invites proposals for consideration in one of its new publications entitled Occasional Paper Series. The topic for this occasional paper is "Re-Connecting the Pipeline: African American Education in the Next Century." The Center for African American Research and Policy invites proposals for manuscripts (e.g., conceptual work, empirical data, research syntheses, discussions of community-based issues, and reports) specifically examining this topic.

Proposal Submission Guidelines: All proposals for this Occasional Paper topic should be submitted online at <http://www.caarpweb.org/publications/submission.php> by September 1, 2005. Each proposal should be in MS Word format and no longer than 5 double space pages. The proposal should include: objectives and purposes; perspective(s) or theoretical framework; methods, techniques, or modes of inquiry; data sources and evidence; and practical or scientific importance of the study. In addition, all proposals should include name(s) of each author, university affiliation, phone number and e-mail address. More information about the Occasional Paper Series can be found at: <http://www.caarpweb.org/publications/ops.php>

The Impact of Hip-Hop Music on African American Youth: Implications for the African American Community

The Center for African American Research and Policy, the research arm of the Brothers of the Academy Institute invites proposals for consideration in one of its new publications entitled Occasional Paper Series. The topic for this occasional paper is "The Impact of Hip-Hop Music on African American Youth: Implications for the African American Community." The Center for African American Research and Policy invites proposals for manuscripts (e.g., conceptual work, empirical data, research syntheses, discussions of community-based issues, and reports) specifically examining this topic.

Proposal Submission Guidelines: All proposals for this Occasional Paper Series topic should be submitted online at <http://www.caarpweb.org/publications/submission.php> by October 1, 2005. Each proposal should be in MS Word format and no longer than 5 double space pages. The proposal should include: objectives and purposes; perspective(s) or theoretical framework; methods, techniques, or modes of inquiry; data sources and evidence; and practical or scientific importance of the study. In addition, all proposals should include name(s) of each author, university affiliation, phone number and e-mail address. More information about the Occasional Paper Series can be found at: <http://www.caarpweb.org/publications/ops.php>